

Tenure Of Appointees To Commonwealth Tribunals

Summary

- 1.1 One of the Department of Justice's responsibilities is to ensure that there is an efficient and effective system to support the business of the courts. Delivery of that function depends on the availability of appropriate judicial resource and, therefore, on the effectiveness of the system for judicial appointments and removals.
- 1.2 The Department has a keen interest in the operation of Schedules 2 to 5 to the Northern Ireland Act 2009. This response notes that, although the arrangements created by the 2009 Act have only been in place for a short period of time, their operation to date has not given rise to any particular concerns. As a key stakeholder in the system, however, the Department will be keen to note the experience and comments of others and any recommendations for change which may be made by the Committee.
- 1.3 The Department's particular functions under Schedules 2 to 5 to the Northern Ireland Act 2009 extend to agreeing the maximum numbers of judicial office holders with the Northern Ireland Judicial Appointments Commission ('the Commission') and the terms and conditions of appointment of certain tribunal members determined by the Commission. This response notes that the Department's experience of the 2009 Act arrangements for delivery of those functions has been positive thus far.
- 1.4 The Department is currently considering options for reform of the tribunal system in Northern Ireland, including future arrangements for delivery of functions related to the appointment, removal and terms and conditions of appointment of tribunal members. This response notes that the Department
